US JUDGE GRANTS INJUNCTION TO HALT TRANSGENDER POLICY

IA U.S. judge blocked Obama administration guidance that transgender public school students must be allowed to use bathrooms of their choice, granting a nationwide injunction sought by a group of 13 states led by Texas. Reed O'Connor, a judge for the Northern District of Texas, said in a decision late on Sunday that the Obama administration did not follow proper procedures for notice and comment in issuing the guidelines. He also said the federal guidelines had the effect of law and contradict existing legislative and regulatory texts. The ruling by O'Connor, an appointee of Republican President George W. Bush, gives an initial victory to the states, which filed their lawsuit amid building national conservative backlash to the Obama administration's stance on transgender rights. REUTERS

PFIZER BOOSTS CANCER DRUG ROSTER WITH $14B MEDIVATION DEAL

2Pfizer Inc., beating out numerous other bidders, said it would buy U.S. cancer drug company Medivation Inc. for $14 billion in cash, adding its blockbuster prostate cancer drug Xtandi to the company's growing oncology roster. Medivation shares were up 20 percent at $80.43 in midday trading, just shy of the offer price of $81.50 per share. Shares of Pfizer, the largest U.S. drugmaker, were little changed. The offer is at a substantial premium to Sanofi SA's initial offer to buy Medivation for $52.50 in April that pushed the San Francisco-based company to put itself up for sale. The deal, which Pfizer said would immediately boost its earnings, comes four months after it and Ireland-based Allergan Plc scrapped their $160 billion merger. Pfizer has since bought Anacor Pharmaceuticals Inc. in a $5.2 billion deal to add an eczema gel to its portfolio. REUTERS

GERMANY, FRANCE, ITALY SAY EUROPE MUST MOVE FORWARD AFTER BREXIT

3The leaders of the euro zone's biggest economies held talks on Monday in the aftermath of Britain's shock decision to leave the European Union and said Europe had to turn its back on populists who blamed Brussels for all its problems. Speaking on an aircraft carrier off the Italian island of Ventotene, Germany's Angela Merkel, France's Francois Hollande and Italy's Matteo Renzi issued calls for closer security cooperation and better opportunities for young people. In a meeting heavy on symbolism, the three leaders visited Ventotene to lay a wreath on the tomb of Altiero Spinelli, an Italian intellectual seen as a founding father of European unity. REUTERS

Somerville ends fight against Wynn casino in Everett

The city has reportedly spent $399,758 on legal fees related to the fight since last July.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
letters@metro.us

After proposing to reverse the state's gambling law and spending hundreds of thousands to fight the Wynn casino in Everett, Somerville Mayor Joseph Curtatone announced Monday that his city will no longer appeal the permit granted by the state Department of Environmental Protection.

"I want to be clear: Our appeal was never about stopping the casino, but rather about our civic duty to protect the health, safety and quality of life of our residents," Curtatone said in a statement. "While we did not get everything we asked for, the appeal did yield significant and meaningful results for our residents, so we feel the process worked."

The city of Somerville was appealing the Wynn Boston Harbor's Chapter 91 waterways license, issued by the DEP, which delayed construction and forced a hiring freeze. According to Wynn, that forced the April groundbreaking on the $2 billion resort to be pushed back until August.

On Monday, Curtatone said recent changes to the permit, after his administration challenged it, have satisfied the community's core concerns with the casino, which will sit along the Mystic River, opposite Somerville. Now, there will be an increased amount of public open space and a decreased term for the license, from 85 years to 50 years.

"This means current residents will have greater community benefits now, and the next generation will have an opportunity to reassess benefits within a more reasonable time period," Curtatone said.

The appeal also ordered Wynn to operate a ferry, which Curtatone said was not previously a condition of the license. The ferry, required for the full 50 years of the license, should reduce casino road traffic by about 6 percent, according to the Wynn organization.

"In one of the most congested areas of the country, every bit counts," Curtatone said. "Every trip shifted off the road and onto that ferry will reduce air pollution in our neighborhoods and traffic delays for all."

With these changes, Curtatone said he sees no need to further pursue legal action. In total, Somerville has spent $399,758 on Wynn-related legal fees since last July, according to Boston.com.

"With all legal challenges behind us, we can now focus entirely on making Wynn Boston Harbor one of the most powerful job generators and economic catalysts to ever benefit the Commonwealth," said Robert DeSalvio, president of Wynn Boston Harbor, in an email. "We are pleased to be joined with all our neighboring communities in making this a historic development for all."

Curtatone wasn't the only one to fight the casino. In January, Boston Mayor Marty Walsh ended a long legal battle with Wynn Resorts with a Surrounding Community Agreement that focused on commitments for traffic improvements.

"Our efforts over the past two years have been to protect the people of Boston and ensure the neighborhood of Charlestown is treated fairly," Walsh said in a statement after that decision. "Residents have been trying for years for a solution for traffic congestion in Sullivan Square and Rutherford Avenue, and we must work together to improve local transportation infrastructure. I offered to keep an open line of communication throughout this process, and I thank Steve Wynn for coming back to the table to listen to Boston's needs."

Report: $50 in gas will get you farther now than in 2008

Summer may be winding down, but there's still time for weekend warriors to scratch their travel itch and take part in the great American road trip tradition.

And now, according to trend analysts at Howmuch, that $50 in gas money will now get you farther than any summer since the beginning of the Great Recession.

Researchers arrived at that finding by crunching numbers from the June months of 2005, 2008, 2011, and 2014 through 2016, while assuming a car fuel efficiency of 24 miles per gallon, the new-car average for 2014.

The site also published 20 maps for 20 major American cities, mapping the distances $50 worth of gas could have taken you at each of those time points.

The difference is striking: In 2008, $50 would provide about five-and-a-half hours worth of highway driving, just over 300 miles. In 2016, that same amount jumps up to eight-and-a-half hours, about 530 miles' worth.

That distance has climbed steadily every year since 2008, but still hasn't reached its 2005 value: Back then, $50 worth of gas would've gotten you about nine hours of driving, over 550 miles from home base.

As for this summer: Drivers in Boston could make it down to Hampton, Virginia, this summer much farther than their 2008 limit of Philadelphia and South Jersey.

Speaking of the other major Northeast cities: If you're leaving New York City for greener pastures this season, Bangor, Maine, or even Quebec City are within your grasp.

Travelers could also head west and hit Columbus, Ohio, but travelers in 2005 could have driven the extra 25 miles to Toledo — if they wanted to. Riders

ABANDONED BIRD

Suspects wanted for animal cruelty after bird found in trash in Dorchester

The Animal Rescue League of Boston is searching for animal-cruelty suspects after rescuing a severely neglected bird from the trash last month.

On July 25, someone in Dorchester noticed "something odd" with the trash put out around Norfolk Street, according to the Animal Rescue League. In the middle of the garbage waiting to be collected was a birdcage filled with maggots, cockroaches and an Umbrella Cockatoo.

The bird was emaciated and had a serious medical condition that required emergency surgery. After undergoing surgery, she is recovering at the ARL and workers there say that soon she'll be well enough to find a new home.

The ARL has also posted a call for the public's help on its Facebook page, asking if anyone recognized the white Umbrella Cockatoo, which members of the organization have named Mayfield.

"The person(s) responsible for neglecting and cruelly abandoning this lovely bird needs to be held accountable for their actions," the ARL wrote.

The bird PROVIDED

Staff there are looking to identify Mayfield's original owners, and noted that failure to provide proper food, drink, shelter, and a sanitary environment and willful abandonment of an animal are felony violations of Massachusetts's anti-cruelty laws. Someone convicted of these crimes can face up to seven years in prison.

"Sadly, Mayfield is not the first animal we've seen who was abandoned and left to die in the trash or on the streets," the ARL wrote. "We understand that tough economic conditions also affect pets, but let's get the word out that the last resort is not throwing your pet away."

Anyone who recognizes Mayfield or has any information regarding her case is encouraged to contact the ARL's Law Enforcement Department at 617-226-5610. KRISTIN TOLISSAUNT

Trump denies 'flip-flopping' on immigration

Trump had planned to deliver a speech on Thursday in Denver about his immigration policy, but that event has been postponed, a campaign official confirmed.

Republican presidential nominee Donald Trump insisted on Monday he was not changing his stance on immigration, despite a comment from a top aide who said his plan to deport 11 million illegal immigrants was still under review.

"I'm not flip-flopping. We want to come up with a really fair but firm answer," Trump told Fox News. He did not elaborate on his policy.

On Sunday, Kellyanne Conway, Trump's campaign manager, was pressed repeatedly in a CNN interview on whether Trump would go ahead with a call he made in November to set up a "deportation force" to remove undocumented immigrants.

"To be determined," Conway said. She also said Trump was committed to a "fair and humane" approach to those living in the country illegally.

Trump's immigration position has been a centerpiece of his campaign. When he announced he was running for president, he called for construction of a wall along the nation's border with Mexico to stop undocumented im-

BRIEF

Judge orders State Dept. to review 14,900 new Clinton emails

A judge ordered the State Department on Monday to review and determine the potential release of 14,900 documents, most of which are believed to be emails to or from Hillary Clinton, that turned up in an FBI investigation of her use of a private email server as secretary of state.

The documents are part of a cache that the FBI turned over to the State Department at the end of its probe into Clinton's use of the server. The FBI found Clinton was "extremely careless" with sensitive information by using the private server but recommended against bringing charges against Clinton. She has been dogged by questions about the issue throughout her run for the White House.

The State Department could make public the first batch of emails in October, weeks before the Democratic nominee faces Republican rival Donald Trump in the Nov. 8 election.

State Department employees are due to craft a timeline for the release at a meeting on Sept. 23.

Ryan Lochte has a case of the Mondays.

Following his semi-apologetic interview on NBC's "Today," Speedo USA announced Monday it will no longer be sponsoring the disgraced Olympian. The company released a statement noting it will donate $50,000 from Lochte's sponsorship fee to Save the Children, specifically for children in Brazil. "We cannot condone behavior that is counter to the values this brand has long stood for," it said.

The lightly frosted swimmer teared up and admitted that he "over-exaggerated" his version of that "robbery" incident in Rio during an interview with Matt Lauer, but refused to say that he "lied" — which, tbh, he did. The 32-year-old (definitely an) adult apologized and said he hoped "if they give me that chance I definitely know I can turn this around and become that role model for little kids."

Ralph Lauren then announced it, too, would no longer continue to sponsor Lochte — noting that its relationship with the swimmer was exclusive to Rio. Syneron Candela's Gentle Hair Removal came next (though Lochte's hairless abs and face remain on the website), followed by Airweave, a mattress topper manufacturer based in Japan, which tweeted its decision to drop Lochte after defending the U.S. ambassador in an earlier statement.

'It comes with the territory'

Ozzy Osbourne discusses being called a 'Satanist' and Black Sabbath's final tour.

LINDA LABAN
letters@metro.us

Ozzy Osbourne's colorful public life is peppered with well-known tales of drugs and booze, bitten-off bat heads and dead doves. In the 1980s, he was dubbed the "Prince of Darkness" and banned from San Antonio, Texas, for urinating on the Alamo — an oversight, not disrespect, he's since clarified. But San Antonio is where Black Sabbath's final show will take place, ending a five-year spree. Speaking from his home in Los Angeles, Osbourne tells us he is not retiring, but instead will continue doing what he does: Osbourne, after all, is a rock 'n' roll singer.

The final leg of the final tour — how does it feel? It hasn't quite sunk in yet. I am sure it will be pretty emotional once it comes to the final show, but everything has to come to an end at some point, and it has been an incredible journey.

Nowadays, the media calls you the Prince of Darkness affectionately, but for a while in the 1980s, people ripped into you. How did it feel to be called a Satanist?

It comes with the territory. I have never been one to conform to rules and so I just told them where they can stick their opinions. No wonder they thought I was the Prince of Darkness.

What are your plans for after the tour?

I'm currently playing around with some song ideas. I have a few things jotted down, and once Black Sabbath is off the road, I will be heading into the studio with my band to get the songs recorded. Once it's all in the can, you can be sure to see me back on the road again.

Bill Murray will steal your fries

Ladies and gentlemen, hide your French fries, because Bill Murray is coming after them. Vanity Fair reports that last weekend, the actor was seen munching on a fry that he snatched from a stranger's plate at the Martha's Vineyard airport.

Thankfully, the Redditor Sonowthatim here snapped a pic of Murray snagging his friend's fries, providing further evidence that Murray is a fry thief.

The first complaint came about six years ago, when another Redditor said Murray took some fries off his plate on the corner of 46th Street and 7th Avenue in New York City.

The damning fry-theft photo is now prompting other victims to speak out.

Another Redditor commented, "He did this to me at In & Out in Burbank 4 years ago. No one believed me.

This post is my own proof that he does in fact do this."

You do you, Bill Murray, you do you.

Thor and Loki slum it in civvies

The sons of Asgard are slumming it back on Earth.

Chris Hemsworth, who usually dons a red cape and flashy armor as Avengers member Thor, posted a photo of himself in a hoodie and jeans alongside Tom Hiddleston, who plays his ne'er-do-well stepbrother Loki, on the set of "Thor: Ragnarok" in Brisbane on Monday.

began. According to local news stations, the gods of thunder and mischief were dressed to blend into the crowd on the street, which was decorated to stand in for New York City — which didn't fare so well the last time these two were on Earth in "The Avengers."

Few plot details are known about "Ragnarok," which will be released in November 2017. But Marvel has confirmed that Cate Blanchett will make her franchise debut as Hela, the Norse goddess of death. Which might explain why the brothers seem to have teamed up again — we wouldn't try taking her on alone, either.

The evil next door

Daniel Radcliffe takes on a real-life domestic terrorism plot in the thriller "Imperium."

EVA KIS
@thisiskis
eva.kis@metro.us

Daniel Radcliffe has been acting since age 10, so playing an FBI agent who goes undercover among white supremacists wasn't the hard part of his new movie, "Imperium."

"Driving on camera," says the 27-year-old Radcliffe, who had to do some hectic maneuvering in a pickup truck for the film. "I was more comfortable doing the gun stuff than driving. And I have spent no time around guns, but I felt like I was more likely to kill someone in a car. I passed my driving test a couple years ago specifically so I could drive on films."

"Imperium" is based on a real-life domestic terrorist plot foiled by former FBI agent Mike German, played by the "Harry Potter" alum. We talked to the star and the film's screenwriter and director, Daniel Ragussis, about the dark subject matter and why Radcliffe has opted out of social media.

You tend toward projects with an element of magical realism, like "Swiss Army Man." Are you drawn to that, and what appealed to you about this film?

Radcliffe: I am drawn to magical realism, it's a lot of what I read — my favorite book ever is "The Master and Margarita."

One of the things I love about [the genre] is anything can happen if you can justify it well enough. As an audience member, I want to find out about a world that I don't know. The books that I read have the same quality: You're in that world, and exploring it is what's fun about it, and that becomes uninteresting to me when you're watching a Hollywoodized bullsh— version of something, whereas with ["Imperium"] it felt like a really authentic representation of what being undercover and that life is like, and that was really exciting to me.

The ideologies of "Im-perium" seem so dated, but the past few months have been a rude awakening to how common they still are.

Ragussis: I was really not aware the degree to which these ideologies and groups are such an incredibly prevalent thing in our society. Mike would make the point, quite consistently, that 50 years ago, these beliefs were absolutely mainstream and the whole idea of civil rights and universal suffrage and tolerance are the modern idiosyncratic thing.

The white supremacists do some terrible things in this movie, but they're also shown living normal lives.

The value of privacy

You just finished the play "Privacy," about the dangers of putting our lives on the Internet. But you're actually not on social media.

Radcliffe: There's a bunch of reasons I'm not on Twitter and stuff, and part of it is that I'm f---ing lazy and I wouldn't be able to respond to everyone, it would stress me out. A lot of people who don't have privacy find it hard to change and grow as a person because you're doing that in full view of everyone, and that can be inhibiting. I'm very lucky that I had a lot of people around me who gave me that perspective and encouraged me to actively try and work out who I was away from the media version of me.

It does seem like we're all allowing the world to vote on the "best" version of ourselves.

Radcliffe: We're seeing more and more young people who are afraid of talking on the phone, and if you ask them about it they'll say things like, "I'm scared of making a mistake." To me, that is a danger for conversation, we have to be able to talk to each other and f--- up and make mistakes.

But there's a balance, too — we should have more privacy, and the people in charge should have less. Not in their personal lives, but how things are done. One of the main problems at the moment is, we got to meet Sen. Ron Wyden through doing the play who asked James Clapper the famous question, "Does the NSA collect data on hundreds of millions of Americans?" to which he lied, not wittingly. He's an amazing man, but we need many more people like him who are technologically-savvy enough to ask the correct questions.

Ragussis: No man is a villain in his own heart. It was very important for this movie because one of the complex and important things we have to hold in our head is that people are capable of espousing ideologies that are horrific but are still human beings and love their families and make jokes and enjoy a good meal.

Radcliffe: If you go into [white supremacist] message boards, there are the political posts but the hilarious stuff is the recipes posts.

Ragussis: One of the things that characterizes these movements is their attempts to find ideological purity, and so one of the things that members want is to enter a community where they can be free of corrupting influences, which can make its way into something as innocuous as a recipe.

The swastika cupcakes served at the cookout in the film were a nice touch.

DISTRIBUTION NOTICE:

■ TRYING TO KEEP UP: Rapid shipments of heavy packages containing Vault Bricks loaded with valuable .999 solid U.S. State Silver Bars are flowing around the clock from the private vaults of the Lincoln Treasury to U.S. State residents who call 1-866-626-3962 Ext.FMS1311 to beat the 48-hour deadline.

U.S. State Silver Bars go to residents in 6 states

U.S. residents who find their state listed below in bold get first dibs at just the $59 minimum set for state residents while all non state residents must pay $134, if any silver bars remain

NATIONWIDE – The phone lines are ringing off the hook.

That's because U.S. State Silver Bars sealed away in State Vault Bricks are being handed over to MA, NH, VT, RI, CT and NY residents at just the state minimum set by the Lincoln Treasury for the next 2 days.

This is not a misprint. For the next 2 days residents who find their state on the Distribution List above in bold are getting individual State Silver Bars at just the state minimum of $59 set by the Lincoln Treasury. That's why everyone should be taking full Vault Bricks loaded with five U.S. State Silver Bars before they're all gone.

And here's the best part. Every MA, NH, VT, RI, CT and NY resident who gets at least two Vault Bricks is also getting free shipping and free handling. That's a real steal because all other state residents must pay over six hundred dollars for each State Vault Brick.

Just a few weeks ago, nobody knew that the only U.S. State Silver Bars locked away in the private vaults of the Lincoln Treasury would be allocated to the Federated Mint for a limited release to residents in 6 states. Every single one of the 50 U.S. State Silver Bars are date numbered in the order they ratified the Constitution and were admitted into the Union beginning in the late 1700s.

"As Executive Advisor to the Lincoln Treasury I get paid to deliver breaking news. So, for anyone who hasn't heard yet, highly collectable U.S. State Silver Bars are now being handed over at just the state minimum set by the Lincoln Treasury to residents in 6 states who beat the offer deadline, which is why I pushed for this announcement to be widely advertised," said Mary Ellen Withrow, the emeritus 40th Treasurer of the United States of America.

"These bars are solid .999 pure fine silver and will always be a valuable precious metal which is why everyone is snapping up as many as they can before they're all gone," Withrow said.

There's one thing Withrow wants to make very clear. State residents only have two days to call the Toll Free Order Hotlines to get the U.S. State Silver Bars.

"These valuable U.S. State Silver Bars are impossible to get at banks, credit unions or the U.S. Mint. In fact, they're only being handed over at state minimum set by the Lincoln Treasury to MA, NH, VT, RI, CT and NY residents who call the Toll Free Hotline before the deadline ends two days from today's publication date", said Timothy J. Shissler, Executive Director of Vault Operations at the private Lincoln Treasury.

To make it fair, special Toll Free Overflow Hotlines have been set up to ensure all residents have an equal chance to get them.

Rapid shipments to state residents are scheduled to begin with the first calls being accepted at precisely 8:30am today.

"We're bracing for all the calls and doing everything we can to make sure no one gets left out, but the U.S. State Silver Bars are only being handed over at just the state resident minimum set by the Lincoln Treasury for the next two days or until they're all gone, whichever comes first. For now, residents can get the U.S. State Silver Bars at just the state minimum set by the Lincoln Treasury as long as they call before the order deadline ends," confirmed Shissler.

"With so many state residents trying to get these U.S. State Silver Bars, lines are busy so keep trying. All calls will be answered," Shissler said. ■

Mini-MBAs are making a huge difference

Bentley University offers two business boot camps for professionals looking to sharpen their skills.

ALIZAH SALARIO
@Alirosa
alizah.salario@metro.us

People who succeed in business tend to try really, really hard. They also possess traits that can't easily be taught in business school — ingenuity, resilience and creativity, for starters.

So why not reverse-engineer the MBA process, and help people become business savvy after they've proved themselves to be problem-solvers and innovators?

That's the thinking behind mini-MBA programs, condensed but intensive business courses that usually take place over a few evenings or weekends. Generally, mini-MBAs are geared toward professionals who are already established in their fields and want to bolster their business credentials.

Fast and affordable, mini-MBAs are often worth the investment. ISTOCK

These quick and affordable business boot camps are popping up across the nation, and Bentley University offers two innovative options: a traditional mini-MBA in the essentials of management, in which professionals from all walks of life can learn business fundamentals; and a business and the creative process course, a collaboration between the Massachusetts College of Art and Design and Bentley University geared toward artists and designers.

To be clear, a mini-MBA is no substitute for a traditional MBA, which typically takes two years to complete, says Alan Hoffman, program director of Bentley's mini-MBA and a professor of management.

Creative problem-solvers

The 10-day business and the creative process mini-MBA grew out of an initiative funded by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, and today helps artists become versed in the language and culture of business.

"The idea is if we could teach artists who work in companies about business, then maybe the business could tap into their creative minds and solve problems from a different perspective," says Hoffman.

The course includes brainstorming sessions on real-world business problems. Companies come in and present specific problems to the students, who are then tasked with coming up with creative solutions. Previous projects include one for Dunkin' Donuts, in which students conceived of an app allowing customers to order and pick up food without have to interact with a person — all the way back in 2008.

Says Hoffman: "Innovation is the key to success in business, so the companies that innovate and hire these creative minds are the ones that win in the long run."

Savvy professionals

Bentley's mini-MBA program in the essentials of management uses case studies and business simulations to teach financial fluency and the foundations of process management.

"There's a whole lot of people who work at companies who have engineering degrees, they're scientists at biotech companies, or they're HR people and they studied history or English literature, and their companies send them to this mini-MBA so they can get some business background because they didn't study in college," says Hoffman.

Part of the mini-MBA ethos is that learning doesn't stop after our careers start.

"It helps [people] in their job, and it makes them grow as better employees."

Are relationships affecting your health?

Don't underestimate the power of a bad (or good) relationship.

We all know it's important to have good relationships in order to be happy. But can a bad breakup have long-term negative effects on your body? Or, on the flip side, can finding your soul mate lead to a happier, more healthful you?

Studies have shown there are physical and mental consequences and benefits directly correlated to how our relationships are doing. A 2011 Columbia University study showed our brains experience withdrawal symptoms following a breakup, while the American Heart Association revealed that we really can suffer from a "broken heart" during times of distress.

We asked Dr. Carmen Harra, a psychologist and author — at work on her eighth book on relationships — for her take on how good and bad relationships can affect your health.

What can bad relationships do to your body?

There is a correlation between your state of being and your relationships. Your well-being affects your relationships and vice-versa.

Let's say you're out of shape — that could be because of fear of abandonment or a breakup manifesting. If you're battling an illness, you will become resilient and you will lash out on your partner. And dealing with those difficult emotions is the big problem. We tend to deal with our problems in self-destructive behaviors. For example, some people turn to drugs and to alcohol in order to cope with their situation.

Should a couple that fights all the time stay together?

Of course, everyone fights, but I believe in fighting in a constructive way. If the fighting isn't making you feel better about the problem at the end of the day, then the relationship is a negative one. It's important to cut out all negativity, and if you can't resolve the negative emotions in a romantic relationship, then it is important to end it.

How can you make your relationships better in order to stay healthy?

Emotions need to be processed. You don't need to release or ignore negative emotions right away, but you need to acknowledge them and process them. If you stuff them away, negative emotions can grow inside you like weeds. Letting those weeds grow can make you sick. So don't be afraid to feel sadness or rage or confusion, because embracing it will help you get rid of it.

If you're overwhelmed with the things that are getting you out of balance in your life, find a place and a practice where you can release and recharge on your own, instead of lashing out at the people around you. For example, going to the gym and meditating are good ways to release anger and other negative emotions.

The point is to not hold onto emotions that can make you sick.

Do you believe in finding your soul mate?

Sometimes we have practical relationships that are just temporary. A person can come into your life for a reason and a season. He or she isn't coming to stay, but this person is teaching you something. It's hard to find your soul mate, but you shouldn't spend the rest of your life with someone if you both are settling. If you're compromising because it's convenient, you will end up living separate lives.

You should know the moment you see someone that they are your soul mate. And that doesn't mean that it's all easy — you might have a few bumps in the road. But the great thing about a soul mate is that the relationship only gets better. You just glow. You are emotionally in control and are the best, healthiest version of yourself, because the other empowers you. They support you and want you to be your best.

Glaucoma Eyedrops Interrupting Your Daily Life?

If so, you may be eligible to participate in the ARTEMIS clinical research study of a current glaucoma therapy being studied in an investigational dropless way.

BRADY ABSENCES RAISE QUESTIONS

Matt Burke is the National Sports Editor and a columnist at Metro US.

Follow him on Twitter
@burke_metro

What in the world is going on with Tom Brady?

He did not play in the first preseason game against the Saints because he was attending a memorial service (believable). He did not play in last week's preseason game against the Bears because he sliced open his thumb with scissors while tending to his cleats (sketchy, but a decent excuse). Then, No. 12 missed Sunday and Monday's practice. Those absences were "excused by the team" but were "not injury-related."

The narrative surrounding Brady over the past 15 years has centered around him being the greatest practice player of all-time. He's the first to arrive, last to leave, demands perfection — all that. So it's extremely curious as to why Brady is missing all this valuable practice time.

Now, it's possible that the Patriots are just fine with all this as they want to give most of the preseason snaps to Jimmy Garoppolo anyway — considering he'll be the one starting in Weeks 1-4. It's also possible that Brady is upset with Bill Belichick that he hasn't taken a preseason snap yet. It's also possible that Brady and the Patriots have legitimate excuses for all of the above issues and aren't talking too much about the matter because they don't like to talk about any matters.

The Patriots' recent track history here is troublesome, as it took days for details to emerge regarding Chandler Jones showing up shirtless and high on synthetic weed on a Sunday morning. Belichick also showed up for a press conference that week with a black eye.

Just odd stuff.

The explanations from the team were late and far from thorough, and those stories would have blown up if the Pats weren't so damn good on the football field. (They coasted past the Chiefs in the divisional round of the playoffs later that week.)

Yeah, it's possible that everything is on the up and up regarding Brady and his absences, but this is a time the team could do themselves a favor by being a little more transparent. If everything really is fine and dandy — they've created their own distraction by being needlessly sketchy.

Sox need to take care of business

In 42 days, the MLB postseason will begin with or without the Red Sox.

The odds say the Sox (69-54) will indeed be playing playoff baseball, given their recent stretch of winning 8-of-10 games and their place atop the Wild Card standings (two games up as of Monday afternoon). They're also very much alive in the race for the division crown as they were behind the Blue Jays (70-54) by just a half game as of Monday.

The Sox would be wise to clean up against the lowly Rays (52-70) in St. Pete this week if they have plans of distancing themselves from Toronto and Baltimore (67-56).

It wouldn't hurt either if the Sox started to get contributions from players who have underachieved to this point in the season. Clay Buchholz (4-9, 5.42 ERA) has shown signs of improvement of late as he pitched six innings in Detroit against the Tigers last week and allowed just one earned run on six hits. Buchholz will get the start Tuesday as he throws in place of Steven Wright, who is still nursing a shoulder injury. Wright is expected to be back in the Sox's rotation this coming weekend at Fenway against the Royals.

Rick Porcello (17-3, 3.22 ERA) is set to pitch tomorrow against Tampa Bay and Drew Pomeranz (10-9, 2.95 ERA) will close out the road trip for the Sox on Thursday. MATT BURKE

Clay Buchholz will get the ball for the Red Sox tonight against Tampa Bay. GETTY IMAGES

Patriots positional preview: Quarterback

The team will surely carry three quarterbacks on their roster.

JAMES TOSCANO
@Jimmy_Toscano
sports@metro.us

Plenty of key players have been missing from the Patriots' first two preseason games, but one absence has stood out above them all. And unfortunately for the Pats, he'll be missing the first four regular season games, too.

As we're all aware, Tom Brady will serve a four-game suspension stemming from the infamous Deflategate scandal. We're not here today to discuss why everything about Deflategate is a complete joke, but instead to look ahead at the quarterback position and what we can expect this season from Jimmy Garoppolo and then beginning in Week five, Brady.

And if we see Jacoby Brissett take a meaningful snap in the regular season, something went very wrong.

LOCKS

Tom Brady, Jimmy Garoppolo, Jacoby Brissett

The Patriots have three quarterbacks in camp, and all three will make the team. With Brady out, Garoppolo will take the starting quarterback duties for the first four games, and then as Patriots head coach Bill Belichick has already stated, Brady will take the job back over. That will bump Garoppolo to the backup job, and the rookie Brissett to third string.

Jacoby Brissett looks downfield against Chicago last week. GETTY IMAGES

This is not a Drew Bledsoe-Tom Brady situation, folks. Not yet, anyway.

Brady returns for his 17th NFL season and at age 39 is still considered one of the best quarterbacks in the NFL. Will the Patriots miss him for four games? Of course.

Should they get by without him? Yes.

Their first four games look like this: at Arizona, vs. Miami, vs. Texas, at Buffalo.

Though the Cardinals could prove to be a tough matchup in Garoppolo's first career NFL start, you wouldn't call those four games a gantlet. Many feel as though Garoppolo can get the Patriots into Week 5 with a 3-1 record – which is actually better than the Patriots' record at that point two seasons ago before they went on to win the Super Bowl.

Through two preseason games, Garoppolo has shown improvement. After going 11-for-18 for 168 yards against the Saints, he went 16-for-21 for 181 yards and a touchdown against the Bears last Thursday. He hit tight end A.J. Derby for a touchdown, which capped off a nice two-minute drive before the half.

Garoppolo should benefit from two things through his first four NFL games: the system he plays in and the Patriots' defense.

Don't expect Garoppolo to start airing out footballs down the sideline. The Patriots' bread and butter is going under defenses with shorter passes, screen plays and passes in the flat. He's proved he can do that and already looks to have nice chemistry with Chris Hogan.

Aries If you show your willingness to take good advice and stick to the rules, you will impress everyone. Be careful when dealing with money matters and institutions.

Taurus Say what you mean and mean what you say in order to eliminate uncertainty. Love, romance and family fun are all featured. Someone from your past will surface.

Gemini Work quietly on the projects that are important to you. Don't present or promote what you are doing prematurely. Anger will not help you get ahead.

Cancer If you participate in events that you believe in, you will reach your goals. You'll be rewarded in unusual ways. Romance is encouraged.

Leo Keep everything you hear and see in perspective. Being prepared for whatever comes your way and having the fortitude to stay put until the moment is right will help you advance.

Virgo Your stellar approach to everything you do will keep you in the running for advancement. Don't let competition scare you. If you can imagine it, you can do it.

Libra Financial matters will improve. Contracts can be negotiated and signed, and changes at home will help you cut costs. Don't buy into someone else's scheme. Invest in yourself.

Scorpio An unusual and interesting connection with someone who shares your beliefs and goals will develop. Build your life on facts, figures and emotional happiness.

Sagittarius Be observant when dealing with your peers. Offering a steady hand will help you avoid people trying to take advantage of you. Don't be afraid to be different.

Capricorn You've got all the right moves. Follow your heart and your intuition, and go with the flow around you. There isn't anything you can't accomplish if you set your mind to it.

Aquarius You need to do more to make sure that certain partnerships are copacetic. Aim for equality to avoid conflict, fatigue or dissension among yourselves.

Pisces It's a good time to make personal or professional moves. An improvement in how you approach life in general will help you win the support you need. EUGENIA LAST
